

As a flight attendant, I feel permitting cell phones to be used in flight as a general rule would compromise safety. The nearby passengers would complain about the cell phone user talking loudly into the phone. It is yet undetermined whether or not cell phones interfere with aircraft navigation but an individual contemplating doing serious harm to an aircraft or flight personnel could phone other individuals elsewhere in the aircraft to advise them of pilot useage of lavatories, meal transfers or flight crew rest break movements.

Cell phone useage as it is allowed before departure and after landing is working just fine. I see no need to extend any further useage.
